“The Sacred Struggle” by Rabbi Neil

One common theme seems to connect a notable minority of books in my personal library. From Dow Marmur’s “Beyond Survival – Reflections on the Future of Judaism” to Scott Shay’s “Getting Our Groove Back,” Eugene Borowitz’s “Renewing the Covenant,” Jonathan Romain’s “Renewing the Vision” or Steven Cohen and Keith Kahn-Harris’ “Beyond Belonging,” I have noticed that a subsection of the books I own reveal the authors’ nervousness about the future of Judaism, and in the face of that nervousness, these authors suggest a wide variety of ways to ensure the Jewish future. This is not just a liberal thing – after all, the Chief Rabbi of the United Synagogues also once felt the need to write a book called “Will We Have Jewish Grandchildren? – Jewish Continuity and How to Achieve It.”

The theme for my High Holy Day sermons this year – The Sacred Struggle – has come from much wonderful discussion with Temple members over the last year. Jews don’t believe and we don’t submit – we wrestle and we struggle, which is why we’re named Israel (meaning, “He Struggled with God”) after an essential Biblical moment. In the past, members of the Jewish community used to collectively struggle about certain things given certain shared assumptions, but those assumptions no longer hold to be true (the Shattered Paradigms I spoke about last year). Now, though, we struggle not just with traditional matters like Jewish law, modes of spirituality, and appropriate liturgy, but also with other matters that reveal the potentially wondrous diversity in Jewish thought today.

Why do I say “potentially wondrous diversity?” In theory, diversity is a Jewish strength. We learn from those in our community with differing views from ours, we gain new perspectives, we grow - that’s how Jewish community has always been... at least in theory. Sometimes, though, misunderstanding diversity has led to conflict – such a thing was at least one cause of the Second Temple’s destruction two thousand years ago. The question of “What does a Temple stand for?” or, even more prescient, “What does our Temple stand for?” is an unbelievably complex, emotional one in the face of a rapidly-changing Jewish community, and there are appropriately widely diverse opinions. All Jews and all Jewish communities wrestle in different ways with whether our Judaism is universal or particularist, we struggle with balancing tradition and modernity, with religious and secular values, with authority and autonomy, with how to understand our personal and communal role in the world. I believe that wrestling is The Sacred Struggle that every community must openly embrace as it naturally changes with the times and tries to respect those who want to hold onto what once was while also honoring the people who want to explore what could be.

This year, during my High Holy Day sermons, I intend to share my perspective on that Sacred Struggle for our community, and during our Yom Kippur Dialogues and Study Session, I hope that you’ll also share your thoughts so that together we can move into the New Year with a better understanding of our shared vision of what we stand for, and on how we act on that vision together.

Wishing you a happy and healthy New Year, Rabbi Neil

The summer months have proven to be quite eventful on our TBS campus. After years of patching and skirting the issue, the roof over our Sanctuary failed us in a big way causing pronounced damage in the Library as well as the foyer. New roofers were called in and unfortunately they found quite a mess up there – numerous layers of roofing material piled on top of roofing material on top of roofing material, all soaked through, hindering efforts to properly deal with the derivation of the leaks. Time for a new roof after 40 years of stop-gap measures. On top of this disaster, on August 15th the soffit in the Sanctuary began pouring with water after another major rain storm. This time it was our 40 year old windows: the caulking had dried up leaving huge gaps around the windows, allowing the water from the storm to blow into the building, pool above the soffit and literally pour into our midst during Services. While all of this damage was being evaluated, it also became clear that the three air conditioning units were in dire need of attention, partially due to incorrect wiring on one unit and a blown motor in another unit.

Those of us who attended Services during this time were witness to ladders, drop-clothes, buckets and other materials piled in our foyer. At first we thought we should clean up the mess every week but then we realized it was appropriate to share our reality with each other, with our congregation. It may not have been pretty but there is nothing like a dose of reality to drive the point home:

WE NEED YOUR HELP.

This is our home away from home. And if we intend for this beautiful building to be preserved for our children and grandchildren, it requires maintenance. The carpet hasn't been replaced in 24 years. The cushions in the pews have never been replaced. It is our Synagogue, worthy of our loving care. And it is up to each of us to shoulder that responsibility. I implore you to come forward with your ideas for grants or fundraising for our ailing building.

It has been a challenging year on many fronts. The building issues, while difficult, are trivial compared to the war in Gaza, the daily bombardment of rockets into Israel, the continued cruel imprisonment of the hostages. Many of us have family and friends in the line of fire and some of the stories they share are considerably different from the news reports we hear in the US.

We have been fortunate to avoid any serious anti-Semitic incidents here at TBS. However we must remain on our toes. We continue to have security at virtually all of our functions. We maintain close communication with local, state and federal law enforcement agencies to be informed of any potential threats. It is an unfortunate necessity in these times, but we remain vigilant and dedicated to the safety of our congregants.

As of this writing the High Holy Days are fast approaching. As usual, these events take a great deal of planning and preparation by the Rabbi, office staff and volunteers. A huge THANK YOU in advance to all of you who are putting in hours and hours of time to make the coming Holy Days meaningful for all of us.

5786 is almost here, with many challenges and opportunities. I am an optimist and I look forward to the continued thriving success of our congregation and in Jewish communities around the world.

*L'shalom,
Meredith (Meri)*

RELIGIOUS SCHOOL

ROOTED IN COMMUNITY

By Sheli Marks

Children learn and grow in many ways—through stories, through discovery, through the lessons we consciously teach. Yet one of the most profound teachers in their lives is community itself.

When a child sees adults pausing to listen to one another, when they watch friends helping friends, when they take part in celebrations where everyone has a place, they are absorbing lessons that shape their inner world. They are learning how to be human.

Research shows that children who feel part of a community develop greater resilience, stronger emotional health, and deeper confidence in themselves. Much of what we hope to cultivate in our children - kindness, empathy, cooperation - cannot be taught in isolation. These qualities are awakened in relationships, in the living web of connections that surround them. If the world is fragmented or isolating, they may feel uncertain about their place in it. But when they witness genuine community—people of all ages showing up, caring for one another, celebrating together—they internalize those patterns. They come to know: the world is trustworthy, I am not alone, I, too, have something to give.

This is the miracle of community.

I warmly invite you to our Back-to-School Celebration on Sunday, September 7th at 10:00 AM. Together we will welcome the school year.

May this gathering be the first of many moments this year where our children feel—in heart and soul—the strength of belonging.

With warmth,

Sheli Marks

MAX FEINBERG - OCTOBER 18, 2025

We are delighted to celebrate with our son, Max Feinberg, as he is called to the Torah as a Bar Mitzvah on Saturday, October 18, 2025. Max has worked with dedication in his studies. He is constantly chanting Torah and practicing prayers and we are so proud of the young man he is becoming.

Max is an 8th grader at Santa Fe Prep and is an avid skier and soccer player. He plays soccer for both his school and club teams.

He has an older brother, Noah, who is an 11th grader at Santa Fe Prep and has a Shih Tzu Lhasa mix named Willy Bear. Max is very grateful for the support he has received from Harvey McGuiness, Brian Sterle, Ellen Zieselman, Meredith Brown, Rabbi Neil and the entire TBS community. We look forward to sharing this meaningful milestone with our family, friends, and temple community.

MATEO BLEICHMAR - OCTOBER 11, 2025

Mateo Bleichmar is excited for his Bar Mitzvah on October 11, 2025. His Torah portion is Shabbat Chol Hamoed, or Exodus 33.12 to 34.26, which talks about Moses' request to see God's glory, and the golden calf. When he is not studying for his Bar Mitzvah, Mateo is an 8th grader at Santa Fe Prep. He enjoys playing soccer wherever he can and plays for multiple teams. He loves cutting through the defense with through balls but is also happy juggling in the backyard. This summer he participated in training camps and tournaments in St. Louis, Oklahoma City and Princeton. He also enjoys learning new things, particularly when it comes to math and science. Mateo speaks Spanish and English at home because his father was born in Buenos Aires, Argentina and his mother is from Philadelphia. He has an older brother, Gabriel, who is an 11th grader at Prep and a black labrador retriever named Sol. In preparation for Mateo's Bar Mitzvah, his mother has been fine-tuning her challah recipe. Mateo is very grateful for the wonderful support he has received from Harvey McGuiness, Brian Sterle, Ellen Zieselman, Meredith Brown, Rabbi Neil and the entire TBS community.

Asher Amswych will be called to Torah during their Bet Mitzvah Ceremony on October 25th. Bet Mitzvah is the more modern term used by non-gender-conforming Jews. Some of the prayers and readings in the ceremony will reflect Asher being agender. Asher has always had a particular interest in dragons. Being a fan of roleplaying games, it was not surprising when Asher started running Dungeons & Dragons campaigns for their friends, or expressed an interest this summer in LARPing (Live Action Roleplaying). Asher has also created their own Roleplaying Game. Asher enjoys board games with the family and computer games with their friends, as well as watching anime and reading manga. Asher has been known to attend conventions to meet with stars from TV shows and movies.

Asher has attended a number of the communal Havdalah evenings in the last year, partly for company, partly for the food and partly for the ritual itself. As the introverted child of two Rabbis, Asher has for years balanced their own self expression and Jewish expression with that of the community, and their ceremony will be an expression of that.

Asher has always been interested in philosophy and theology, and in questioning society and how and why things exist or work as they do. Asher likes to look at the world with a unique set of eyes, always questioning the logic of what is, and wondering what could be.

Asher's Torah portion is Noach. In their commentary about the Torah portion, Asher will be exploring the science and the rabbinic commentaries behind the salinity of the oceans compared to rain which is usually freshwater. Asher will particularly be exploring how salt water and fresh water fish could survive together in the same water, and what that means for us.

ASHER AMSWYCH - OCTOBER 25, 2025

Asher invites members of the community to donate to the Temple in honor of their celebration

Introducing Judith Erger!

Five years ago, after visiting Santa Fe in every season, Judith and her husband Randy moved here from Alexandria, Virginia.

Judith's son Ethan lives in Reno, Nevada and is a professional rock climber, and her daughter Melissa and her partner Wesley live in Fairfax, Virginia, where Melissa is the cheese department manager for Wegmans.

Judith is originally from the New York/New Jersey area and earned a degree in Interior Architecture at Drexel University in Philadelphia. She ran her international namesake design firm, Erger Design Studio, for 15 years, then pivoted to a career as a Jewish communal professional and joined the Union for Reform Judaism staff.

At the URJ, Judith first served as Assistant Regional Director of the URJ's Pennsylvania Council, then became Assistant Director of the URJ's Department of Synagogue Management.

Her diverse portfolio included leadership development, synagogue mergers, and preservation heritage, with an additional specialty in the study of sacred space. Judith authored the URJ publication, "Rejoice in Your Handiwork: Sacred Space and Synagogue Architecture" and she was the guest scholar-in-residence at numerous Reform congregations discussing and teaching the evolution of American Reform synagogue architecture. After Judith's 18-year career at the URJ, she served as Executive Director of Adat Shalom, a large Reconstructionist congregation in Potomac, Maryland.

Judith was an avid rock climber and after her retirement became an adaptive sports advocate and rock climbing program organizer and instructor, providing climbing opportunities to people with physical disabilities. She organized and operated the Metro-DC chapter of Catalyst Sports, an adaptive climbing clinic in Alexandria, Va., the only such clinic in the metropolitan Washington D.C. area at that time.

Judith and Randy are enjoying life in Santa Fe! She loves to knit and to walk her dog in the Santa Fe/El Dorado area. Judith volunteers at Kitchen Angels and Santa Fe's United Way Retired and is vitally interested in working for social action and social justice in her community and the world. Judith looks forward to meeting Temple Beth Shalom members and being part of the TBS community.

Welcome to Temple Beth Shalom Judith!

Introducing Nohemy Solórzano-Thompson! Nohemy Solórzano-Thompson is a transplant to Santa Fe, relocating from Washington State's Puget Sound area. Nohemy and her spouse Jonathan moved here to be closer to family members who moved to New Mexico 20 years ago. After visiting for those two decades and falling in love with this area, remote work during the pandemic made it possible to finally settle in Santa Fe.

Nohemy retired in December 2024 as a DEI Program Manager at the Washington State Department of Services for the Blind (DSB), a small cabinet agency under the Washington State Governor's Office. At DSB, Nohemy led DEI programs and training initiatives to ensure all communities in Washington State were equitably served by the agency whose mission is "inclusion, independence, and economic vitality for people with visual disabilities." Prior to DSB, Nohemy was a DEI Learning Design and Delivery Professional for the Washington State Department of Enterprise Services, where she collaborated on a training program to ensure that public servants provide inclusive services and achieve fair outcomes with cultural relevance and humility.

Before working for Washington State, Nohemy was an Associate Professor and Program Chair of Film Studies at Westminster College in Utah and Spanish Department Chair at Whitman College in Washington State. Using theoretical frameworks derived from Latino and Queer Studies, Nohemy's published work contributed to our understanding of the multifaceted representations of race, ethnicity, gender, and sexuality in Latino communities and popular culture. The daughter of immigrant parents; a French Sephardic Nicaraguan father and a Mexican mother, Nohemy grew up in Florida. Nohemy and Jonathan are the proud guardians of Celi, a rescue dog who enjoys running on the Oregon beaches. She loves to talk about movies--all of them, from world cinema to art-house to Marvel CU.

Introducing Robbie and Casey Pickering and their children Jonah and Emily! Robbie and Casey and nine year-old Jonah and five year-old Emily are in the process of moving to Santa Fe from Raleigh, North Carolina. Robbie is an environmental engineer, having earned his BS degree in environmental engineering at Northwestern University and Casey is a chemical engineer, earning her BS degree in chemical engineering at Virginia Tech. Robbie and Casey met while they were both working for the environmental consulting firm Eastern Research Group (ERG) in Washington, D.C. At ERG, Robbie has worked with government agencies on projects that focus on sustainability, water efficiency, climate, green building, and waste reduction. While at ERG, Casey worked on projects relating to upstream oil and gas regulatory enforcement and greenhouse gas emissions inventorying. Approximately nine years ago, the couple moved from the Washington D.C. area to Raleigh, North Carolina.

Five years ago, Casey stepped away from engineering work to focus on creating community impact, serving on the board of Toward Zero Waste and Jonah's elementary school PTA, as a cub scout den leader, and volunteering with other local, environmentally-focused non-profits. Robbie will now join ERG's Santa Fe office, working on water efficiency and sustainability projects with New Mexico state and local entities. Casey will undertake homeschooling for Jonah and Emily, who are excited to also join the TBS Religious School. The family looks forward to exploring Santa Fe's outdoor activities and culture, to supporting environmentally related efforts and projects, and to joining the Temple Beth Shalom community.

Welcome to TBS Robbie, Casey, Jonah, and Emily!

Hello TBS Community! My name is Ella Lhea Steinberg Meyer, and I am so excited to introduce myself as the Preschool Jewish Educator and Doobim teacher. When I was an infant, my family joined the Temple. We found such a beautiful, welcoming, and introspective community that truthfully cares about its members. Continuing through religious school and BSTY (our Temple Youth Group I highly recommend), I graduated my final year of high school with a foundation of not only cultural awareness, but the ability to truly think. I remember my mentor, Ellen Zieselman, told me, “If you’re not asking questions, you’re not doing it right.” After I attended a college in California, I decided to focus on my passion for teaching. In this way, I am able to share what I know while expanding my knowledge in general. I was incredibly fortunate to grow up and return to a community that would always accept and support me, and I want to ensure that all our families at TBS have a chance for their students to invest in Judaism. Shabbat is a fundamental experience for many Jews around the world, and showing how connected we all are is powerful for the children. At the same time, however, I also love to teach about the similarities between other religions. Children are naturally inquisitive, and I am more than happy to discuss these big topics with them. Not only do I aspire to have our classes and Shabbat services be a celebration of TBS religion, I hope to instill curiosity and the desire to ask the “big questions.” Learning is our lifelong journey, and I will work as an encouraging and supportive step along that path. What's Happening Now | By Jeff Zilka, Chair

The role of TBS's Development Committee is to help ensure that our synagogue has the financial resources it needs to fulfill its mission, now and in the future.

This year, we relaunched our Chai Circle, honoring members who give $1,800 or more annually above membership dues. We also instituted a new membership category: Habonim – the Builders – for those able to give $10,000 or more to TBS annually.

Our main fundraiser, however, remains our High Holy Days appeal, which began in late August and will continue until the end of Sukkot, October 13. By now, you should have received information about the High Holy Days appeal.

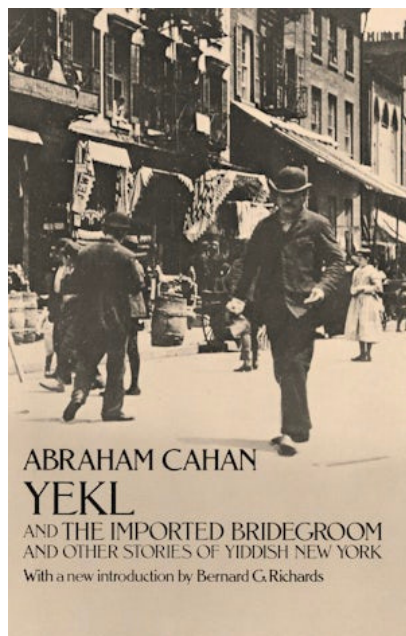

Intended to be accessible to all congregants, our High Holy Days appeal is the core opportunity for everyone to support Temple Beth Shalom.

Our goal for this year's appeal is $100,000. Two generous members of our congregation, who prefer to remain anonymous, have pledged to match all donations above what each congregant gave during last year's High Holy Days appeal, up to a maximum of $20,000.

Dues, which we held steady this year, cover only half of our operating budget. With your generosity and this philanthropic match, we will exceed our goal. As we enter the new year, we ask you to give as generously as you are able.

You can read more about the High Holy Days appeal, watch a video of your fellow congregants describing what TBS means to them, and donate on our webpage. As always, you can also mail or bring a check to the TBS office.

Sincere wishes to everyone for a happy, healthy, peaceful, and prosperous 5786!

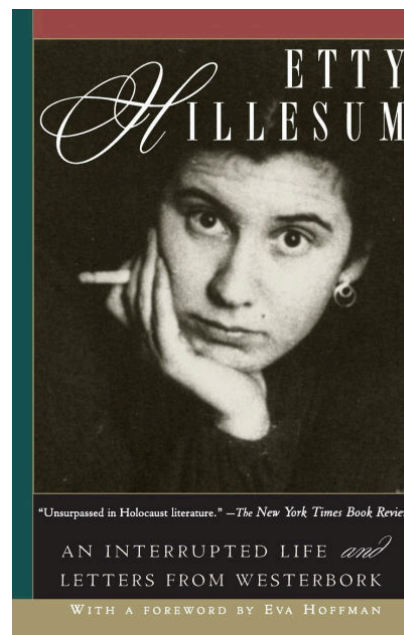

On September 21 (Sunday at 2 p.m. on Zoom), we'll be discussing Yekl and The Imported Bridegroom, stories from Yiddish culture, by Abraham Cahan, first published in 1896.

Among Cahan's many claims to fame, he was the founder of The Forward, an excellent and important Jewish newspaper that is still published (though now in English, and online).

Then, on October 18 (Shabbat rather than our usual Sunday), we'll be joining the HaMakom book club, in person at HaMakom at 3 p.m. to discuss An Interrupted Life and Letters from Westerbork, by Etty Hillesum. This meeting will take place in the afternoon after an 11 a.m. live presentation of The Etty Project, also at HaMakom. The Etty Project is a one-woman play based on the journals and letters of Etty Hillesum, "a young Jewish Dutch woman writing diaries in Amsterdam during the Second World War. In these diaries and later, her letters from Westerbork concentration camp, Etty bears witness to what it means to be human and commits herself to a radical choice: not to hate, even as she opens her heart to the horrors unfolding around her. She wrestles to write the life she is living — her loves, her work, her humor, her spirituality, and her transformation. She was murdered in Auschwitz in 1943 at the age of 29."

The Cultural Roots of Christian Nationalism, and its Implications for American Jewry

Ron Duncan Hart

Ron Duncan Hart, Ph.D. is a cultural anthropologist, author, and filmmaker. When he heard the Unite the Right chant that “Jews will not replace us” in Charlottesville in 2017, he recognized the trope that he had heard for decades in the American South. During ethnographic research he had performed in a working-class neighborhood in Atlanta during the 1970’s, he had heard preachers saying that the United States should be ruled by Christian leaders; feeling disenfranchised, and feeling loss of cultural influence, they were blaming the federal government, Jews, Blacks, and foreigners for corrupting (and undermining) their Christian way of life. Their arguments that Jews would replace Christians, take away the Bible, and outlaw the practice of Christianity are the kind of fear mongering that antisemitic forces have historically used against Jews. Across America, the cultural phenomenon of Christian nationalism emerged in thousands of neighborhoods like this in the last decades of the twentieth century. This talk will look at the development of the cultural roots of Christian nationalism and how its tenets relate to Jewish life.
